Drought, drought, is the complaint from all parts of the island. Butter has long since given out, and milk threatens to do so, for the cattle on many ranches are reported as dving for want of feed. We hear similar re ports from the other islands, but Oahu appears to has been less favored in the matter of rain supply than others of the group. Meantime the supply for the city is not diminished, which pleasant fact we attribute to the withdrawal, some months ago, of the cattle from the head of Nauanu valley, whereby vegetation has wonderfully progressed, conserving the water.

A TIDAL WAVE -We learn from Waialua on this island that at about midnight on Sunday the 20th inst., there was a sudden and violent irruption there of the ocean, amounting to a tidal wave, which from the description of the damage done York, and Gordon, of Georgia, in the Senate, must have been some ten or more feet in height. and Blaine and Hill, in the lower House, got At Governor Dominis' country residence, the sea reached inland 150 yards beyond high water mark, and with sufficient force to overthrow a stone wall. cious action of friends soon restored harmony. In other places the ancient sand-beach has disappeared and in its place are bare rocks and cobble stones. We hear also that a field of cane belonging to a native was overflowed and some damage done to the crop; a house was carried away entirely in one place near the beach. At the same hour when the wave occurred at Waislua, people at Honolulu who happened to be awake, noticed a sudden increase in the noise of the surf on the reef, and fishermen report that the tide came in very rapidly and unusually high, but nothing like what occurred at Waialua. By the steamer on Sunday morning we may learn that the wave was noticed on Maui and Hawaii, and perhaps in time we shall hear of volcanio disturbances somewhere.

· FOREIGN NEWS.

By the arrival, on Monday evening, of the P. M. S. Australia, from Sydney, January 3, we have dates from London to the 1st inst. The war in Turkey, and the interests affected by it continue, of course, to be the all-engrossing topic of interest among all classes, and the tone of public feeling in England appears to be becoming more decidedly warlike. It seems as if a few more successes of the Russian arms will bring about a state of excitement that nothing but a declaration of war against Russia and consequent alliance with Turkey will serve to allay. That such a declaration will shortly be announced, everything seems to forebode. The great preparations now going on for war on a grand scale would not be made, if the English Cabinet had any hope that a peaceful solution could be arrived at. This may have been their belief from the beginning of hostilities; still it is evident they have been "drifting" with the

The statement that the English Premier intends proposing to Parliament to accept the suzerainty of Egypt, with the consent of the Sultan and Khediye, has caused a good deal of discussion in the Continental press; and the German papers are favorable to the project. It dosa not appear that they speak with authority.

Amid all these stirring and exciting events still come rumors of peace. We think that all attempts to bring about a lasting peace, for the present at least, will prove futile, for neither of the combatants are sufficiently exhausted to listen to anything more than an illusory armistice during which they may gather strength to renew the conflict more flercely than ever. It is apparent that Turkey's means of defense are not exhausted, and that she feels or hopes if she can sustain the war a little longer, its continuation may bring to her side powerful allies who will aid her in resisting any exorbitant demands of Russia in treating for peace. Indications point to England and Austria as those allies, and they are certainly the two powers most interested in the "Sick Man's" fate. She evidently expects, and is preparing for intervention. The London Observer, (Dec. 30,) says that Russia has refused to conclude a peace with Torkey, and must leave England to interfere in the war. Thus we see what all this warlike preparation means. Russia is in deathly carnest, and England rapidly becoming so. If the latter country takes up arms, it is almost certain that the Austria, in reply to the Turkish note inti-
